

Health care is a complex and important issue facing our country. Many people are concerned about rising costs, accessibility and quality. Increased affordability and accessibility are two goals that I believe we should be working toward when considering legislative changes. I also believe that doctors and patients should be making health care decisions and not the insurance industry. I am committed to improving the nation's health care system, reducing the number of uninsured individuals and families, and decreasing the costs of health care.

First Congressional District Health Advisory Council